

DO.....

- Shred all personal and financial information (bank statements, ATM receipts, credit offers, credit card bills, etc.) before discarding.
- Keep your personal information in a secure location.
- Call the post office immediately if you do not receive your mail.
- Be aware of others nearby when entering your PIN at ATM machines.
- Limit the number of credit cards and personal information you carry in your purse/wallet.
- Report lost/stolen credit cards immediately.
- Cancel all inactive credit cards.
- If you have applied for credit and have not received the card on time, immediately report it.
- Closely monitor the expiration dates on your credit cards. Contact the creditor if your replacement cards have not arrived.
- Review your credit report twice per year to safeguard your identity.
- Use non-standard passwords on your accounts. Avoid using maiden names, birth dates, children's names and social security numbers.
- Match your credit card receipts against monthly bills to make sure there are no unauthorized charges.
- Avoid using your social security number for any identification purposes.

DON'T.....

- Volunteer any personal information when using your credit cards.
- Give your social security number, credit card number, or bank account numbers over the phone unless you have initiated the call and know who you are speaking to.
- Leave receipts at ATM's, bank counters or gasoline pumps.
- Leave envelopes containing your credit card payments in your home mailbox.

HOW THIEVES GET YOUR INFORMATION

- Online Data—On the simplest level, thieves access data that consumers share through phone listings, directories, memberships, etc. thieves can also purchase sensitive information about someone (name, address, phone numbers, social security number, birth date, etc.) from an online broker.
- Direct Access to Personal Documents in the Home—Unfortunately, there are identity thieves who can gain legitimate access into someone's home and personal information through household work, babysitting, healthcare, friends, etc.
- Purse/Wallet—Stolen purses and wallets usually contain plenty of bankcards and personal identification. A thief can have a field day using this information to obtain credit under the victim's name or sell the information to an organized crime ring.
- Dumpster Diving—Thieves rummage through trash cans searching for pieces of unshredded personal information that they can use or sell.
- Mail Theft—Crooks seek out and steal from unattended/unlocked mail boxes to obtain pre-approved credit card offers, bank statements, tax forms, and checks.
- Inside Sources—A dishonest employee with access to personnel records, payroll information, insurance files, account numbers and/or sales records can wreak havoc.
- Imposters—Many identity theft victims have been taken in by individuals who posed as someone with legitimate or legal reason to access the victim's personal information.

What Should I Do If I Become A Victim of Identity Theft?

1. Make a single toll-free call to one of the national credit bureaus.

You only make a single call to any one of the three credit bureaus. That credit bureau will notify the other two of the crime.

- Place a fraud alert on the victim's credit report.
- Opt the victim out for all pre-approved offers of credit for two years.
- Provide a free copy of the victim's credit report within three days.
- Verify with the victim all information on the credit report.

2. File a police report. Get a report number and/or copy of the report should anyone request proof of the crime.

3. Contact the fraud department of your creditors.

(e.g., credit card issuers, phone companies, utilities, banks and other lenders). Describe your identity theft problem and follow up with a letter or affidavit. This is very important for credit card issuers, since the consumer protection law requires cardholders to submit disputes in writing.

4. File a complaint with the Federal Trade Commission (FTC).

The FTC handles complaints from victims of identity theft, provides information to those victims, and refers complaints to appropriate entities, including the major credit-reporting agencies and law enforcement agencies.

The ID Theft Affidavit is a special tool developed to help simplify the ID theft reporting process for consumers. It is a standard form that can be used by victims to report the same information to different companies, such as the three major credit bureaus, and other banks or creditors where an account has been opened and/or used under the victim's name.

5. Take appropriate actions, depending on your identity theft circumstances. If you suspect:

- Your mail has been stolen to obtain bank or credit card statements: File a report with the U.S. Postal Inspection Service Office.
- A thief has changed a billing address on a credit card account: Close all accounts that have been tampered with, request new PIN's and passwords.
- Your social security number has been stolen: Contact the nearest Social Security Office to report the suspected abuse.
